Are you proud of the decisions you have made in your lifetime? Do you believe in living by a code of ethics? If you are a student, do you view academic ethics and online behavior as important elements in your life? This class will address these questions by examining situations which arise when students are surfing the Internet. We will examine ethical issues that arise when students are involved in their academic lives. Students will examine research, cheating, plagiarism, internet identity theft, cyber bullying and cybershamanism. As a result of the discussion students will discuss why students should live a virtuous life. Students will also discuss how the Internet changes the landscape of academic ethics. Students will analyze the cyber world in relation to the world of scholarly communication. Students will be able to understand how the world of scholarly communication changes because of the Internet and discuss the effect that changes in the landscape have on academic integrity.
