If you're storing data on your own computer, you'll probably want to back up your work as well, and online backups are the most common way. Some online services offer the option to back up your files, but usually you'll have to subscribe to a service that does it for you.

If you have ever used Photoshop, then you know you need a license. If you are an individual or small business, you can use the Creative Cloud license (type CC in the search box). You can buy a 'one-time-use' license or an annual subscription. It is not clear whether you can buy a one-time-use license and get a subscription. Both versions require a payment to Adobe, but with the one-time-use license you can renew on a yearly basis and thus save money. Unless you use a hobbyist or closed-source version, the on-use version must be purchased from Adobe. Available on Mac, Windows, iPad, iPhone and Android smartphones. I use Windows, which means my version is I can't download it on my Android device. You might, however, be able to, and if you do, please tell me in a comment. She didn't write about it. And she didn't call it by its real name, the "Black Dragon Family Plot," which was a label applied to World War I by Baron von Haussow and newsreel journalists. I was reading a book by Ben Macintyre, "The Last Duel," and he mentioned that the British kept stopping their prime minister in the streets of London to ask him, "Are you going to put that stupid horse in the Cabinet?" Macintyre said that Churchill was given to alternating bouts of low intensity gloom and exhilarating bursts of anger. One day a small group of Cabinet ministers gathered in Churchill's room at 10 Downing Street. At about 9 p.m. he stomped in. "I am not going to the House tonight," he declared. Macintyre wrote that the ministers were stunned, but none more than Churchill, who calmly strode out. For weeks afterward the House of Commons barber-surgeon James Morrison was summoned to heal Churchill's wounds. The next day, Macintyre wrote, Churchill apologized to his Cabinet. "The language was reprehensible," he said. "How would you feel if you were told you were a horse-faced liar?" Many people who feel despondent over the rise of Donald Trump are doubting a panoply of institutions. Macintyre's observations reminded me of my own experience. Twenty years ago, my brother Doug had a summer job working in the print shop of a small newspaper in Sault Ste. Marie, Ont. One summer night he found himself taking pages from a proofing machine to the bed of his truck. He got about a mile down the road when he realized he hadn't driven through downtown Sault Ste. Marie yet. He didn't know which way to go, so he called the newspaper and asked a dispatcher where to go. Doug was told to turn right at the light at the corner of Second Street and Queen Street. When he arrived at the corner, Doug turned right only to discover that the lights at the corner were not working, causing the intersection to be a one-way left turn. As I was going through my own tour of laments about the state of the republic, Macintyre's story popped into

Reducing the Antibiotic Treatment for Children With Acute Septicemia with Improved Antibiotic Selection. Pediatric patients with acute septicemia require a short course of appropriate antibiotics to save their lives. After conducting pre- and postintervention evaluations in 2009-2014 to determine the cause of high antibiotic use for children with acute septicemia in the intensive care unit (ICU), the use of appropriately targeted antibiotics in the intervention-implementation period was examined. Antibiotic use was compared for patients with community-acquired septicemia; patients with septicemia related to probable or confirmed hospital-acquired infection (HAI); and patients with skin and soft tissue infection. There was a large reduction in the total length of antibiotic treatment for patients with community-acquired septicemia and septicemia related to probable or confirmed HAI. In patients with community-acquired septicemia, the length of antibiotic treatment was reduced from  $10.9 \pm 3.9$  to  $6.9 \pm 3.6$  days, whereas for patients with septicemia related to probable or confirmed HAI, the length of antibiotic treatment was reduced from  $15.9 \pm 5.8$  to  $9.8 \pm 4.3$  days (both p < .001). Aortic dilation and dissection in Marfan syndrome: American College of Cardiology/American Heart Association classification. The American College of Cardiology Foundation and the American Heart Association have published guidelines on management of aortic root disease that pertain to individuals with Marfan syndrome. The guidelines provide classification criteria and guidelines for both aortic dilation and acute aortic dissection. These recommendations will help providers to confidently and effectively manage individuals with Marfan syndrome. However, some clinicians contend that this classification system is too broad to apply to Marfan syndrome in certain clinical scenarios. Organic whole grain foods (WBGF) are nutrient rich foods that are rich in antioxidants and other health promoting compounds (polyphenols, phytate, fiber) and will reduce the risk for non-communicable diseases.
