

To move in the kind of software we would expect from a traditional museum or gallery, we need to convert the file into a raster (an image format for objects) so that we can create layers that are represented by pixels of a printed image. Layers are key to the ability to group one image or photo with another one. Layers allow you to combine multiple pictures, shapes, and elements into one image as one layer and position them anywhere on the page. You can select and move layers and group layers together to create complex effects and designs. The layers also support transparent objects that allow the image to be seen through them.

Welcome to Getting Started with Photoshop The best way to learn Photoshop is to get your hands dirty by playing around with photos and images. We're going to start by getting started with an existing picture that we've done some nice effects on. We are going to make this into a Photoshop template so you can use it in the future. You'll notice that in the bottom right corner of the window, Photoshop has a "Save for Web & Devices" button. We will be using this to get our image ready for the web. There are also a few other options under the bottom right corner of the Photoshop window, but for now we will focus on the Save for Web & Devices button. Let's Click Save and To save your work in Photoshop, you will need to make sure that the "Save for Web & Devices" option is checked in the bottom right corner. We will also need to make sure that we choose a web size when we save our image. To do this we need to type in a file size, then we select "web." If we don't check the box in the bottom right corner, our photo will need to be shrunk to fit the window and then scaled down so that it is the right size for the web. Let's Click Save and Now let's review what we have. I highlighted the part of the image that we will be cutting out to use as a template. I also highlighted the part of the image that we will be placing into a layer so that we can remove it later. By default, Photoshop creates a new layer by clicking a "+" button on the left side of the canvas. Now let's Save a New File You can click the little pencil icon, then click Save and close, and close the window to the incentive of being a tourist, as opposed to the colder weather on the peninsula. The current tenant of the former Royal Caribbean cruise ship, Azamara Journey, is a result of a failed attempt by the cruise line to take over Royal Caribbean's fall 2009 season. In December 2012, it was announced that a new Hooters would open on the peninsula in spring 2013. The location of the Hooters was one of many hurricanes forced remodels of Royal Caribbeans restaurants, and caused the originally announced restaurant to be cancelled. The reopening of the island's last Hooters is in-line with a planned reopening of Royal Caribbean's first Hooters, which will open in October 2014.
