In the wake of a fare evasion incident at Bloor-Yonge Station, TTC spokesperson Stuart Green told CP24 on Monday that the transit commission decided to issue orders to workers to be on the look-out for fare evaders on board the vehicles. Since 2011, the TTC has deployed more than four dozen fare inspectors on streetcars and buses. They issue the standard fare, which is valid for a single ride in the city, even if it is to a location outside the TTC's network. In the past several months, transit commission staff say that they have seen fare evasion rates on streetcars at nearly 12 per cent. As for stability, I have more system crashes in Windows 7 than I have in Linux Mint. >> Mint is great for people that want the latest and best of the current releases. I haven't had any such crashes since. So when you say Windows, you mean Windows XP, Windows 7, Windows 8, Windows 8.1, or Windows Vista? I have installed different versions of Kubuntu, Ubuntu, and Mint, and there have been no problems. And, I'm not sure about your last statement about having more crashes in Windows than
