Unlike a centralized database, if an incorrect piece of data or malicious code is entered, it would take ages for the whole database to get corrected or updated. This is not an issue when it comes to blockchain technology. With a decentralized blockchain based database, users have complete control over their data. This means that while users keep their data private, the blockchain can still be used by anyone, anywhere, anytime without compromising privacy. As a further added advantage, the blockchain is an immutable platform, which means the data is not erased even if any of its users' computers crash or get erased. Blockchain Applications ===== There are many blockchain-based applications now available for users and developers to make their lives easier and more productive. Some of the major blockchain-based applications include the following: COSS - A decentralized exchange and a financial platform that allows users to store and trade
