“We’ve changed the way we interact with the ball,” said Giancarlo Fajetta, Head of Match Intelligence at EA Canada. “We can anticipate a player's next move or simulate his next pass.” When the player carries or carries out an on-ball action, his/her movement patterns are directly changed in the game’s physics engine. Players are given a new level of freedom to react to touch, receive or turn the ball into goal. New technical elements are enabled by this technology and create a completely new feeling of gameplay. “What is most important for us is that the players get closer to life-like performance,” said Horst Stoltenberg, FIFA Technical Director. “In FIFA 21, the players had to think about passing and shooting in a static way. But with motion capture, we could capture the freedom of a player and give them new tools, as the ball now reacts to their actions.” HyperMotion Technology delivers a completely new experience in the 2v2, 3v3, and 5v5 games. In 2v2, you have to be very aware of your teammates and constantly switch from one player to the other. In 3v3, you have to anticipate plays and offer useful help to your teammates. And in 5v5, you have to find your moments and know when you have the right time to pass to your teammates. Check out this snippet of the motion capture footage of FIFA 22’s 2v2 action - watch closely for that brilliant pass from teammate to teammate. The FIFA World Cup season is now well underway, so here’s a sneak peek at FIFA 22’s new Official Pre-Season. From the first match, both teams use a 4-2-3-1 formation. The hosts take charge early with Fernando Torres on the wing, which leads to a 1-0 lead. Santi Cazorla comes in for Cesc Fabregas, who was rested after his travels to the 2018 FIFA World Cup Russia™. With Aubameyang up top, this allows Pierre-Emerick Aubameyang to play the No. 9 role. In attack, both No. 10s play up the field to link up with Aubameyang. Meanwhile, Ander Herrera initiates midfield and serves as the playmaker. FIFA 22 also introduces new
