This paper examines the influence of pre-emergence soil application of 2.5 and 5.0 kg ha⁻¹ of the herbicide Norflurazon (difluoroacetoxy derivative of 2-methyl-4-isoxazolecarboxylic acid) on rye phenolic compounds. These include flavonoid aglycones (kaempferol, quercetin, myricetin, apigenin), their derivatives (gallo catechin-chrysoeriol-gallo catechin, apigenin-glucoside, kaempferol-glucoside) and also cinnamic acid-derived phenylpropanoids. Norflurazon-treatment decreased aglycone concentrations but had only slight effects on phenolic glycosides. Levels of protocatechuic acid-derived phenylpropanoids were increased, while vanillic acid-derived phenylpropanoids and caffeic acid-derived phenylpropanoids were decreased. This indicates that the effect of Norflurazon on phenolic compounds in rye is related to the induction of activities of hydroxycinnamic acid: CoA ligase which increases the pool of shikimate precursors, and to the activation of the pathway for cinnamate-4-hydroxylation which is not inhibited by Norflurazon. Also, effects of Norflurazon on the quantitative composition of protocatechuic acid-derived phenylpropanoids and vanillic acid-derived phenylpropanoids of this study might be related to the activation of phenylpropanoid biosynthetic and degradation enzymes, since methyl jasmonate-pretreated rye (about 2.5 microM) showed a response similar to Norflurazon. A Russian federal investigative committee has alleged that the United States is planning to launch a large-scale military operation in the Baltic states to seize
