You can download NanjupuramQ: c is odd number that also divides to 2^{n-1} ? I am trying to solve this exercise: a is odd number that also divides to 2^{n-1} (n is natural number) Is there any formula to resolve this? I mean if I know the number of term of a and I know that 2^{n-1} is odd and prime, and the number of the odd term of a is n , what I can say about a ? Another question is, can I use a prime number theorem to resolve this? A: If a is odd then $2^{n-1} = \left(2^{n-1}\right) + \left(2^{n-1}\right) + \dots + \left(2^{n-1}\right)$ $\implies a \mid \left(2^{n-1}\right)$ and $a \mid \left(2^{n-1}\right) \implies a \mid 2^{n-1}$ and $a \mid 2^{n-1}$ is true if and only if a is of the form $2k+1$ where k is natural. I have been trying to walk for a little more than two months now. It was nice, and I was getting quite a bit better. However, towards the end of July, I started to go through phases of not being able to walk at all for periods of time. I think it was a combination of several factors. However, when I went to visit my doctor I received bad news. I had
