4-year-old killed in West Littleton crash PARK RIDGE, Colo. (AP) -- Authorities are investigating a crash that killed a 4-year-old girl, whose body was found in the back seat of a pickup truck that crashed into a parked car. The truck was traveling west on Parkway and went off the road near 10th Street, hitting the parked Dodge sedan, state troopers said Wednesday. The girl, identified by a police spokesman as Taya Muckerman, was removed from the back seat of the truck and was found with apparent trauma on her face, one state trooper said. She was taken to a hospital in Parker. State troopers, fire crews and animal control officers are investigating, and the Colorado Bureau of Investigation is assisting. The Protective effects of silibinin and flavonoids on breast cancer cells undergoing hypoxia-induced apoptosis. Silibinin (SIL) and its metabolites have been reported to possess in vitro and in vivo antitumor activity. On the basis of our previous study demonstrating that hypoxia is a major inducer of apoptosis in breast cancer, this study evaluated the effects of SIL, quercetin, kaempferol, and isorhamnetin on hypoxia-induced apoptosis in MDA-MB-231 cells. Cells were cultured for 24 hours in normoxia or hypoxia (0.1% oxygen). The percentage of apoptotic cells was examined by Annexin V binding and by caspase-3 activation. Cell viability, glutathione content, and reactive oxygen species (ROS) level were measured by the MTT assay, 2-thiobarbituric acid reactive substances, and the Griess reaction, respectively. Transcription levels of Bax and Bcl-2 were measured by reverse transcription-polymerase chain reaction. Cells were stained with 4,6-diamidino-2-phenylindole for the detection of apoptotic nuclei. The anti-apoptotic properties of SIL, quercetin, kaempferol, and isorhamnetin were examined after pretreatment with each compound for 2 hours before the cells were exposed to hypoxia. The results showed that hypoxia induced apoptosis as evidenced by the
