Thank you.Q: On Nginx, how can I view all log files rather than just the error logs? On a machine running Debian Wheezy I have set up nginx logging to error_log, access_log and access_log_status. I was having problems with Apache (which uses mod_php) so I moved everything over to Nginx. I found this guide which basically tells me how to have Nginx redirect access to the log files and update them automatically. The problem is, I don't want Nginx to redirect my access, or read my logs. Is there a way to tell Nginx to read these logs, but not redirect them? A: Try enable nginx debugging on: /etc/sysconfig/nginx And then restart nginx: service nginx restart And then, open the logs with: less /var/log/nginx/access.log Also, if you want to change permissions of the logs, change the chown to nginx like this: chown nginx:nginx /var/log/nginx/access.log chown nginx:nginx /var/log/nginx/error.log After the chown, restart nginx again: service nginx restart A: You can configure nginx to

Citation: L.D.R. James, S.D.Yadav, D.M. Patterf,...The present invention relates to a method of producing a plastic molding product, and more particularly to a method of producing a plastic molding product in which a surface of a product, which is not easy to be scratched by an operation of cutting or the like after molding of the product by an injection molding machine, is protected, a surface of a product which is easily scratched can be smoothed so that it is difficult to be scratched, and a surface of a product which has been otherwise damaged can be protected. As a method of molding a plastic molding product by an injection molding machine, a method of producing a plastic molding product by cooling a part of the product in a mold cavity under a high pressure has been proposed. However, in the method of producing
