Seane Corn December 15, 2010 Seane Corn The Believer is a manifesto not for the liberal or the conservative. It's an affirmation of what the current musical landscape has become, a cry to embrace what the youth are already doing. The Believer's belief is that music is not just entertainment, it is a means of communication, a vehicle for love and empathy. It's a portal. It's a doorway. It's a bridge. - Matt Mondanile Seane Corn is back on Sub Pop in new and interesting ways. Not only has the Canadian singer-songwriter returned home to record, it's the first time in her career on Sub Pop, but it's also the first time she has a record made with new drummer John Paul White, of Mr. White & His Sound Machine and Seane Corn & the Paynes fame. The result? An album of new songs, live recordings, and an older set of songs all mixed to sound fresh. Corn's fourth solo effort is a warm and personal affair that straddles old school indie rock, feedback-slathered punk, and electronic beats. "My name is Corn and I've been writing songs since the age of nine." Corn says in a recent, brief conversation between record release dates. "It started with a very formal ballad with tons of operatic effects. After that, I started writing songs with grit, with attitude. I had a great voice but it was not the strong point. Those things could be interesting, but not good. So I just went with the gut. That's the way I play, all the time. But after a few years I learned to be more selective of what I recorded and
