The Road Map is a diverse open-ended, non-linear, interactive role playing game. The Road Map does not follow a linear plot. To start the game, you will need to create a character and enter in The Grotto which is the central space in the game. You will have access to most of the game's world while you are there. If you wish to create a fresh character, you can do so by selecting one of many available choices. You will then be asked a few questions which will influence the creation of your character. You will be asked about your family and history, as well as about your present life. In the Game you must stay in character and not diverge from it. But you may not stay there for long. You may make decisions which will cause your character to leave The Grotto, enter new dimensions and meet other people. The Road Map is NOT an adventure game. You will not be included on a quest. You will not find items, weapons or other objects. In The Road Map, you find yourself along the road. However, you will meet other characters along the road. Some of these are to be included in your character's life story. Others are to be considered as 'cousins' of the character in your life. You may consider joining the lives of some of these cousins. The Road Map is an RPG. You play your part in a larger world. The world can be inside your head. It can be inside a book. It can be across the street. It can be within a community, or amongst a few people, or with a whole nation. Because the world has many dimensions, you are free to choose which one you would like to explore. At any time you may go to another dimension. But once you are there, you may not be able to return until the end of the game. The world is defined by interaction between people. It is not defined by precise boundaries. It has no geography. You will find yourself in situations where you will have to develop solutions to your problems. You will find yourself in situations where you will have to intervene to help the lives of other people. Sometimes you will need to choose between the needs of individual people and the larger needs of the group.

Online Coop Battle! Supports Steam Achievements and Trading Cards Please note, This DLC is available to play online. If you do not already have an account, you will need to create one for online play. You need to have Windows Vista or higher to play the game. You can use Steam to install the game, or play the game directly from the download page. For Online Coop, you will need the same copy of the game. Download it. Once downloaded, keep the game folder, as the game requires this to find your online copy. You also need the instructions I've written for online coop here: 1. Once downloaded, unzip the game and place it into a standard installation folder. 2. Run or start up the game. If you don't get any error or messages, you should be up and running. To play online coop, you need to have the same exact copy of the game installed, and you need to have the Steam Client installed and running in the background (you can do this in Windows Vista and up). To play online coop, simply run the game, as normal. When the online coop will start, you can either select to play the game, or create a new coop game. If you select the game, the game will load the coop you have already selected in the normal game settings. However, if you create a new coop game, you will start a new coop game. At this time, we also have 2 people in the game, as some confusion about where the last coop message was placed. There are 2 people as a consequence, not just 1. But for now, we will work on getting 1 player to work first. If you would like more than 2 people playing, you should have 1 player play, and when that person is finished, have the other player join in the game.

- Interview with Victor Salazar Director and playable of Gothic 1 Victor Salazar, director of Gothic 1: The Resurrection. What was the inspiration behind producing this game? I remember when I was a kid I played a lot of classic DOS games (I've always loved text adventures and point'n'click adventures). I played on my older brother's computer, of course, so I didn't know how the graphics in those games looked like, so I became a little enthusiast of manipulating the images with the hardware on my computer, on an embedded computer. That and the first Unreal 2 engine became my first real inspiration. I realized I loved this kind of graphics. So, Gothic 1 was the result of this deep research. As soon as I discovered the first Gothic engine, I realized how few games used this kind of graphics, how beautiful it was, and I wanted to create the same. Of course, I wanted to make it the best, so I started to recreate the time. I know what happened in the 1980s, and I wanted to reproduce that in this remake. What kinds of gameplay experiences did you have with this genre? I was never a big fan of RPGs and point'n'click adventures, at first, but I loved puzzles, and when I discovered the first Gothic engine, I could see that it was possible to create this kind of puzzles, it was possible to create this kind of adventure, even when the graphic was not that good. This was a great era where the adventure genre was so popular. The '80s inspired me a lot, because I was a teenager in those years and I discovered a lot of old games. I became a big fan of The 7th Guest and Thief and Commander Keen and the first Diablo. I was crazy about that time, so I'm a big fan of this kind of graphics. It was the time when the first Myst games, the first Descent games, the first Liar's Movement games, they were released, so I couldn't actually play these games, but I saw them in magazines, and that's the era I liked. I have some memories with Sierra On-Line, because of Thief 3 and its great graphics. I discovered Thief 4 years ago but it has an old engine, and I'm not so interested in it. What was your focus
