Image Comics, the publisher of the medium-ranked anthology series Saga, launched a “Saga party” at San Diego Comic-Con 2019. The party provided attendees with an opportunity to listen to concept artists and writers talk about their craft, including contributing to Saga as character illustrators. The fan-favorite animated series is now entering its seventh season, and so far the show has been a resounding success. The main reason that the show has been so well-received is because of the same team that was on the original comic series (Writer Brian K. Vaughan, Artist Fiona Staples, colorist Michael Walsh, and letterer Clayton Cowles). This success has led to the team up making more from the world of Saga. They’ve also been joined by Ryan Ottley (colorist) and Gabriel Castillo (cover artist) for the final arc of Saga’s sixth season. The team is continuing the Saga Saga for season seven, which launched in June and will wrap up in the fall. These new covers illustrate the team’s talent by creating new looks for some of Saga’s iconic characters. Lottie (Kasparoff) Maxwell (Marshall) Freya (Hawley) Quin Saga has had many variants of the main characters through the years, so what makes these new covers different from the original ones? The first thing we need to mention is the new characters. Lottie, Maxwell, Freya and Quin are all part of the story in a way that the original characters were not. The team took the opportunity to give the characters the aspects they needed to be more relatable and interesting to those who do not know the original Saga characters. However, to keep in tune with the new characters and for them to have their own style, the team did not change the illustrations of the original characters. To achieve this, they worked with the designs of the original series. In this way, the new characters are taking on a life of their own and becoming more complex. In general, Fiona Staples’ (Fiona) designs are already definitive and make her characters identifiable, but in recent years, she has been able to add more details and nuances to her work. This new story arc is no exception, with new and unique aspects. Lottie (Kasparoff) Maxwell (Marshall) 05a79cecff

Vicente Cordero Vicente Cordero (born September 5, 1929) is an award-winning Filipino animator, author, filmmaker, historian and politician in the Philippines. He is currently the national coordinator of Anakbayan (Anarchist Youth), and a former member of the House of Representatives of the Philippines. Biography Vicente Cordero, a native of Iloilo, graduated in 1942 from the National University of Iloilo with a degree in Commerce. In 1945, he graduated with an A.B. in Communications from the University of the Philippines Diliman. He worked in journalism and broadcasting for U.P. TV after the latter was established in 1947. His first job in advertising was in the print media. In 1962, he was appointed by President Diosdado Macapagal as the communications chief of the then Department of Agriculture, becoming director of the Agricultural Extension Services. In 1970, he was named associate administrator for the World Bank's Agricultural and Rural Development Division. In 1972, he was awarded a two-year fellowship by the Catholic University of Leuven in Belgium, after which he joined the faculty of the University of the Philippines, becoming a full professor in 1976. Cordero also studied broadcast journalism at New York University and wrote his first book, How to Make a Living as a Broadcast Journalist, with his wife, Ma. Luz Escarlata, about their struggle to earn a livelihood from their profession in the Philippines. Other Cordero's name was adopted by Anakbayan and then by the campaign for the 2004 presidential elections. He published his book The Philippine Revolution, the First Decade in the History of the Revolution in 1975, and collaborated with Les Nisperos on the latter's compilation of the speeches of Emilio Aguinaldo. He is a scholar of popular cinema and wrote the history of comic strips in 1990. Cordero also has a television anthology on the Filipino Revolutionary History, on cable TV in the 1990s. He was elected to the House of Representatives in 2010, representing the first district of Iloilo City. He currently serves as the national coordinator of Anakbayan, a youth organization committed to the cause of national independence and social justice. References Further reading Cordero, Vicente A. In vitro evaluation of terbinafine chemosensitivity and biological interaction with fumaric acid esters in dermatophytic infections: combined approach using microbroth dilution and scanning electron microscopy. Terbinafine (TBF) is one of the most powerful oral antifungal agents with fungicidal activity. TBF shows activity against dermatophytes even at low concentrations in vitro. TBF biological interaction with fumaric acid esters (FAE), a transglutaminase inhibitor, has not been determined. The aim of this study was to evaluate the TBF in vitro chemosensitivity and the biological interaction with FAE. In addition, scanning electron microscopy (SEM) and fluorescence microscopy were used to assess morphological changes in M. lucescens and T. rubrum, respectively. The MIC50 values were 0.03 microg/mL for both M. lucescens and T. rubrum using a microbroth dilution assay. The fungicidal activity of TBF against M. lucescens and T. rubrum (0.015 microg/mL) was also evaluated at time-kill assay. There was no interaction between FAE and TBF at a fixed ratio of 10:1 and time-dependent interaction with TBF against both fungi. Changes in cell morphology due to the combination of FAE and TBF were not observed using either SEM or fluorescence microscopy. The in vitro biological interaction of TBF with FAE against T. rubrum was not identified. Q: Ember-data 1.0, multiple relationships to the same collection - paginate?
