Crazy city () is a term in Russian used for a city that is unusually or inappropriately built. Etymology The term derives from the Soviet phrase "шуховый город" (shokhovyi gorny, lit. "village of madmen"). It appears to have been coined during the 1920s by Nikolay Fyodorov, the author of the famous Soviet novel "The Village of the Damned", and is probably inspired by the Russian term shukhov (Шуховое водное регионо или место) (literally, "madcap" or "village" referring to the stage where people appear while performing madcap actions; the term was also used for an open air theatre where an imagined affliction is shown). In Vladimir Nabokov's novel Pale Fire, the famous poet John Shade refers to New York as "the city of crazies". The Russian abbreviation of the phrase "шуховый город" is "город шух", and has been adopted as a rather pejorative term in Russian for a "crazy city" or similar. It is used, for example, in the title of the book of poems Crazy City by Nikolay Fyodorov. Examples New York City is frequently described by Russians as a "crazy city". Moscow is occasionally referred to as a "crazy city" as well. Chris Christie is seen on the left. Mississippi Gov. Phil Bryant is seen on the right. Christie and Bush were discussing Hurricane Katrina, when Trump bragged he could grab women by "them p—sies," according to audio from the 2005 taping, obtained by The Washington Post. Christie, who was at the time running for the Republican nomination, was heard laughing in agreement. Bush is heard replying, "Oh, my god." Under pressure, he then invited Trump back to his show after the election for a reality TV special, which ended up airing just months before the New Jersey governor helped Trump get elected president. After the dust had settled, Christie admitted he had never actually spoken with Trump. But it didn't make him any more popular. "Christie is a proven liar," Clinton told the crowd during a rally in Philadelphia. "He says one thing in politics. "After the election, when he got his hair cut, he admitted that he had lied, that he had never spoken to Trump. But you all know, of course, that there is more than meets the eye, because all politicians lie. "But when he said that, you'll remember that was just two days after he'd been heard laughing about talking about grabbing p—ies on the bus." As WND reported, it was Trump's brother, Donald, Jr., who made the initial decision to fire back at Clinton during the Wednesday news conference. "At least someone is finally pushing back against all these lies," he said. "This is Hillary Clinton being outed for being a lying hypocrite. "She's

.; 1 Chronicles 14:23 53 The watchman at the city gate, when he calls in the watch, he must sound the charge; and he who is on the wall, when he calls in the watchman, he must observe to give a signal. 2 Samuel 6:11 10-3 Samuel spared Agag, because he was his armor bearer, and the Lord promised to David that he would never smite a Jobean from his reach. 2 Kings 3:27 T will make them like the dust of the earth, which the wind hath swept away, and in the end of three days, and in the morning, before the time came, he said to Samuel, "I will go and set off the forces." 1 Kings 19:7 39 When he came to the top of the hill, he looked, and, behold, the people were coming on toward him. Now he descended to the city, and his brothers did not come with him; and they were in the city. 40 And he said to himself, "Now the day is coming, and I will give a command concerning the city; to the chief priests, to the captains of the people, and to the elders, saying, 'By the strength of your hand you shall give a feast to David the king.'" And they were well pleased concerning his request. 41 So Samuel saw that they were afraid of him, and the report of the people was evil concerning him. 2 Kings 1:1 13 Now after this there was great famine in Samaria, and behold, Elkanah, the son of Elihu, from the tribes of Gad and Reuben came to Samaria to buy from them a field. 1 Kings 17:4 3 And the king said to the LORD, "I pray thee, O LORD, keep the people of Israel in these good ways, which they have done, that they turn not from it." Then the LORD spake unto the people go each man to his house." Exodus 10:23 15 But against
