Rakendus # 19 15.8Â .Q: LINQ using async methods I am trying to use the code from this blogpost It seems like there is an error with the 3rd line... While in VS2010 it says, "the best overloaded method match for 'System.Threading.Task.ContinueWith(System.Threading.Tasks.Task,System.Action)' has some invalid arguments" I am new to LINQ, but I think my array of strings and names is the problem. I just wanted to see if there was a way to use this method on a field. Then only do my work if Task.FromResult or similar returns. public async Task> GetFullTextValues(IEnumerable names) { IList result = new List(); foreach (string name in names) { // Create a new task to get the full text value. // Note that this uses Task.ContinueWith, not Task.FromResult // because the compiler can't infer the result type. Task searchTask = GetValueAsync(name);
