My issue is that I want to have an exception for a specific method to prevent override only if the called method has an additional parameter. The best example is this: public class A { public void method() { } protected void method(int i) { } } // I want to prohibit this public class B extends A { public void method() { } } // This should be prohibited: public void method(int i) { } } // This should be allowed: public class C extends A { public void method() { } } public void method(int i) { } } I am thinking to do something like this: public class A { public
