The Jagged1 receptor is expressed on all blood vessels. However, its role in blood vessel development is unknown. In this study, we show that Jagged1 is required for the endothelial cell (EC) differentiation and polarization of vascular ECs, and for their migration through fibronectin-coated matrix. Jagged1 is required for the polarization of ECs at the leading edge of the cell, as well as for the generation of the lumen. In addition, we demonstrate that activated Notch1 induces expression of the transcription factor KLF2, which is critical for formation of vascular ECs. We propose that the Jagged1 receptor plays an important role in vascular ECs, regulating their differentiation, migration and polarization.Scientific Committee Dr. Petra Junker Chromosomal and Genomic Disorders (Chairperson) Prof. Dr. Petra Junker is group leader at the Department of Genetics and Genomic Medicine (GÄGM) at the University of Leipzig and a professor for molecular biology at the University of Veterinary Medicine Hannover. In her research, she uses innovative technologies such as RNA-Seq and epigenetics to find out more about the molecular basis of genetic diseases and to implement new therapeutic approaches in the future. Under her leadership, GÄGM combines the expertise of seven outstanding scientific groups and offers several research programs in the areas of clinical genetics, human diseases (both c6a93da74d
