WinZip is a free utility that allows you to create and manage zip files and manage the contents of zip files. The application comes with a simple and intuitive interface that helps you to create and edit zip files, to extract and delete contents from them and, most importantly, to compress and decompress zip files. Flexible solutions for basic file management Since WinZip can handle both compressed and uncompressed files, you can extract them into a folder structure, manage their access permissions or even delete and replace them in one single click. Extract zip archives, replace contents and create new ones It goes without saying that WinZip is by far the easiest utility to use for both extracting contents from zip archives and also replacing the contents of files. With the former, simply right-click a zip file and click Extract, choose where to extract it and it will be done in a matter of seconds. If you want to replace a single file, enter its name in the search field and click Replace. The new file will be created in the current directory. The program is fully functional and very easy to use. It's easy to download, install and use it. The interface is streamlined, user-friendly and doesn't have many unnecessary options. The long wait for their products is over. The Apple Watch Edition is on the way. Apple has received the green light for manufacturing, although it is unknown when the first models will actually hit the shelves. The internal version of the Apple Watch will be available in the spring of 2015, with an expected retail price tag of about 2,400 euros. After the production is finished, Apple should start to ship the first Apple Watch Edition models in late September of that year. The most interesting thing about the watch will be the beautiful case. It will be made of gold, diamonds, and other precious stones. The band will be made from ostrich leather, alligator skin, or gold. You can see two different prototypes of the Apple Watch Edition that are owned by celebrities. This is the very first time that Apple will sell a completely new product in Europe. The model will be officially launched in the United States on September 9th. The watch will be sold in Switzerland, Hong Kong, and Japan for some reason. This watch will have many more versions, including the silver edition and two colors, if you're not interested in the classic Apple Watch Edition. Do not be worried. Despite the popularity of the Apple Watch, there are still hundreds of thousands of people waiting for the next version. It seems that the rumors are true. Apple is really working on the Apple Watch. The Apple Watch Edition is getting closer and closer to the commercial launch. Many new rumors have been recently leaked. If you want to be the first person to get the Apple Watch Edition watch when it goes on sale, just sign up to an Apple Store. They will contact you for a special email, and you will receive a notification when the Apple Watch Edition is available to order. All of the new Apple Watch Edition model will have many similar features, including the built-in Apple Pay service. The watch will be connected to iPhone using Bluetooth. There will be two buttons on the side. The first button will be used to activate Siri. The second button will open the control center to control the connected iPhone. You can answer calls and send text messages using the watch. You can also view your messages on the watch itself. The watch will support third-party apps. These are the most interesting features of the Apple Watch Edition. The device will be great for fitness fans. Apple will allow the watch to track your physical activity. You will be able to enter the data into the watch
