I've been trying to find an answer to this problem, but I haven't had much luck so far. I am trying to convert an Angular 1.x app to Angular 2 (without the introduction of Typescript). I have used Angular's createComponent() method to import and inject the new component into the Angular 1.x app, and Angular 1.x seems to be able to resolve the components' providers. But the Angular 2 app itself doesn't seem to be resolving anything, either the providers or the service. The Angular 2 code itself works fine, but nothing is injected into it. The Angular 2 code is as follows: import {Component, ComponentFactory, ViewChild, ViewContainerRef} from 'angular2/core'; @Component

System Requirements For Pentract File Checksum-Hash Verfier:

This is one of the few games I own that has a 10-20 hour single player campaign. The system requirements are low, but I'd like to mention the fact that this game is designed for older systems such as Gamecube or PS3. You might have some problems with enemy-AI. Certain enemies (not all of them) have slow animation, or they'll turn and run around when you attack them. They don't seem to look where they're going, so they'll run into some walls and trip over themselves. If you just keep attacking them, eventually
