freePiano supports key macros that allow you to save user defined play lists of single keystrokes and assign them to different input devices. When you record your movements, you can define the sequences of keyboard presses that will be recognized by FreePiano as input actions. You can assign a list of keys and timing values to a single key, to a sequence of keys, or to a play list assigned to a keyboard. The play list functions like a step by step program, where each playback step is associated with a keystroke. Each step is defined as a key macro, which can repeat, stop, or play forward or back. The key macro repeat capability makes it possible for you to repeat keystrokes and record sequences of many consecutive keystrokes in a single step. You can set up to 20 macros in a step, and the total number of steps defines the length of the playback. The step can be repeated indefinitely until you press STOP. When you press STOP, the macro ends and the next playback step starts. FreePiano features a separate macro editor, which provides a fully functional key editor that you can use to edit key macros on the fly.
